

Word on the Street: Lilac Season Has Begun

Sunday, May 11, 2008 at 11:19pm

“April is the cruelest month, breeding lilacs out of the dead land, mixing memory and desire, stirring dull roots with spring rain.” - T.S. Eliot

I just received a friendly reminder of this from one of the rare people who know what my favorite flower is.

I really enjoy the color, the softness and especially the ~~olfactory property~~ aroma - of lilacs. It's a shame that the season is so short that I'll probably miss it's fragrance for another whole year, as I will be in Costa Rica. But a month's access to Parlee Beach once I'm back, unlike my last two summers in Western Canada (which were awesome, don't get me wrong), is well worth the trade.

Don't worry, I like manlier flowers like the Venus Fly Trap...I've seen one eat a small frog before. =)

Kayla Babin at 8:01am May 12

I'm going to start calling you Gilderoy now.

Sarah Burke at 6:34pm May 12

:)

Pierre-André Doucet at 8:00pm May 12

Venus Fly Trap?

Manly?

Reeeally?

Pierre-André Doucet at 8:07pm May 12
[Thumbs through library tomes...]

Ah. Here it is: Men are from Mars. Women are from Venus.