

All Packed Up and Ready To Go

Friday, May 16, 2008 at 12:04pm

I have just completed training with 6 other Canadians, and will be leaving on my flight to Costa Rica at 4 tomorrow morning. The other volunteers are fantastic people, I would have expected no less.

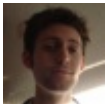

We will be meeting with four Aussies, and will be spending the summer in Juanilama, a remote community of 500 people. We will (probably) be helping out in the town for tasks like the construction of an aqueduct, a meeting hall, installing a sewer system (eww) and possibly an addition to a school. We may also be facilitating workshops for English language skills.

I will not have any internet access during this time, so you will not be hearing from me until August. "No news is good news".

I would love to go into the details of the things I've learned so far, but as I am pressed for time, I can only assure my friends, family and especially sponsors, that I will actually be doing something *meaningful* and that we've got all our bases covered in case something goes wrong.

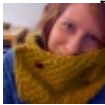

Hasta luego mis amigos. Mucho amor.

-Andrew

Julien Léger at 2:35pm May 16

Keep that great attitude, and you're gonna enjoy your summer! Good luck (with that sewer system;) )!

Erin Hantke at 9:17pm May 16

aaaaaaahhhhhh! nothing from you until august!?! Can't wait to hear all about it. have a fantastic time!